The Story Few Have Heard About Abe Lincoln: Part 2

(From the Paul Harvey Radio Show)

No more would Abe Lincoln lie awake at night, fearing the wrath of the Indians. No more would he be consumed by self-doubt. Abe had finally stood up for what he believed. This land was his now, he and his wife Mary. No one was going to take it away from him.

But, each time Abe's axe chunked into the side of the tree, it obscured another sound. One footstep...followed by another...and another...

A hundred yards away, drawing closer, a lone Indian brave! Camouflaged in forest-colored buckskin, the Indian crept up carrying a long-barreled firearm of the white man. He had been sent on this mission by his tribe; to journey to the Lincoln farm and kill Abe Lincoln.

Abe continued to chop the tree. Stealthily the brave made his way through the forest, treading on the swatches of grass, avoiding the dry twigs which might alert his prey.

A sudden rustle in the treetops, a squirrel jumping from one limb to another caused Abe to glance up and then back to his work. As Abe raised his ax again, the blade glistened once more. The Indian lowered the barrel of his gun, took aim...and fired!

Abe felt the sting of the bullet in his back and fell to the ground. He looked up just in time to see an Indian brave disappear into the forest. Only a moment of consciousness was left, and within minutes Abraham Lincoln was dead.

Abraham Lincoln was dead and from a nearby clearing his eight-year-old son, Thomas, had seen it all. When Thomas grew up he named his son after his father and Thomas's son, also named Abe, became the sixteenth president of the United States.

President Abraham Lincoln and his grandfather both had sons named Thomas. Both had wives named Mary. And both were felled by an assassin's bullet. And now you know the rest of the story.
