

INTERLEAGUER

VOLUME 74, NUMBER 4 • SEPTEMBER 22, 2014

COLUMN ONE

Night games are coming on September 27 and October 4. Be sure to wear your team colors proudly.

Night Games Coming to Kare

For the next couple of Saturdays four Kare Youth League areas will have the opportunity to play on field #1 in Arcadia in the evening. First up this Saturday, September 27 will be UNC & Georgia. For the A, AA and AAA games, we ask that the Georgia fans sit on the bank side (north side) of field #1 and that UNC sit on the side closest to the concession stand (south side). For the C & B games there will be a place for fans on the side closest to Stivers Center (east side) for all fans (there will be no seating provided so make sure to bring lawn chairs. Be sure to wear your team colors and cheer for your team.

This Saturday is the Big Day

Saturday, September 27 will be an exciting day for Pre-K (boys who turned 4 by August 1st) and Kindergarten boys as they come down to Kare Youth League for the opening day of soccer. Activities will be held at 11:00 a.m. at all three locations. Tell someone you know who has a boy this age about the program and invite them to come.

Just Four Weeks to Go

Just a reminder that the Kare Youth League 3-2-1 Raffle Ticket selling campaign ends in four weeks. The drawing will be on Saturday, October 25 at the Future Bowl and all ticket money must be turned in by that night. Here are the selling quotas:

C & B Division – 40	Royal Friends - 35
A & AA Division - 50	Karenas - 45
AAA Division - 80	Pac Five (4 th) - 60
Pac-12 Division - 100	Pac Five (5-6 th) – 80

Members can either sell the quota or pay the difference in cash.

Into the Void - (Part 2)

From USAMM.com (A military blog)

This would be Penney's first time scrambling a jet. She was used to pre-flight, which often took up to an hour. But there was no time for any of that on this day, so she jumped into her F-16, powered up the engine and told the ground crew to pull the chocks.

Sasseville shouted at her: "I'm going to go for the cockpit!" She looked at him for a second, understanding, and replied, "I will take the tail." The pair rocketed down the runway and up into the clear blue sky. Penney's eyes flashed around her cockpit. She had no bullets, no bombs; nothing...except herself.

"I genuinely believed that was going to be the last time I took off," Penney remembers. "If we did it right, this would be it." Within minutes they were arcing over the plume of inky smoke rising from the Pentagon. Screaming over Maryland at 400mph, Penney couldn't stop thinking about the people on board that airliner; mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters, sons and daughters. But her profound sense of duty to her country superseded all that now. "We had to protect the airspace any way we could," she said.

As the jets made their way toward their target, Penney's commander discussed the best options for taking Flight 93. "We don't train to bring down airliners," said Sasseville. "But if you just hit the engine, it could still glide and be guided to a target. The cockpit or the wings are your best bets." Would there be enough time to ram the plane and eject? If I try to bail out, will I miss and screw everything up? If I do hit the plane, will it work?

Then came the heart-breaking news. United 93 had been taken down in a field in Pennsylvania. The passengers, not the two fighter pilots, had sacrificed themselves to stop the attack. Penney and Sasseville aborted the mission and flew on throughout the day, clearing airspace and escorting Air Force One. "The real heroes are the passengers on Flight 93 who were willing to sacrifice themselves," Penney laments. "I was just an accidental witness to history."
