TAR HEELS TACKLE A TOUGH OPPONENT

The Tar Heels battled the Falcons in last Saturday's battle of the pig skin. Matthew Armas opened the game up with a huge 30 yard kickoff return into the endzone to give the Tar Heels an early 6 point lead. The Falcons answered right back scoring on their first possession. After both teams failed their extra point attempts, the score remained tied 6-6 as the Heels recovered the kickoff. Nicholas Ulloa picked up a couple yards on 1st down, followed by Rainn Pollock with a huge 30 yard run up the middle. Noah Walter polished off the offensive campaign with a sweet 3 yd touchdown behind the huge blocks of Raymond Ortega and Mason Munoz to put the Heels back in the lead. The Heels PAT would soar just left of the field goal and the Heels setup to kickoff. The Falcons once again answered back but capitalized on their extra point to gain the lead by one. The Heels then looked to Michael Bowers, who picked up a sweet 22 yard gain around the end. John Shahine pounded up the middle for 3 yards, followed by Rainn Pollock and Seth Contreras with 2 yards a piece. The Heels finally scored again on a quarterback keeper by Matthew Armas for 10 yards on a play action fake. After missing two field goal attempts the Heels decided to go to the air on a Armas-Pollock pass attempt, but the Falcons came up hitting hard and stopped the big play. The Tar Heels kicked off, hoping to hold the Falcons this set of downs, but the mighty Tar Heels couldn't stop the wheels of the Falcon running backs as they soared into the endzone to end the half.

Sammy Franco opened up the 2nd half with a huge 20 yard kickoff. The Tar Heel defense finally stepped into action. Bowers picked up a solo tackle on first down, followed by Matthew Armas and Hayden Caluag with a huge hit on 2nd. Ethan Valenzuela crashed through the Falcon defense on 3rd down, sacking the QB. The Falcons eventually punched through the Heels defensive line and once again scored. Although they were extremely hot and tired, the Heels would not give up so easily. Noah Walter dashed 15 yards down the field followed by Ethan Valenzuela with his first career touchdown from 25 yards out. With just seconds on the clock, the Heels lined up for a PAT to tie the score, but came up just short. Congratulations on an amazing game! Next week the Tar Heels will battle the Kentucky Wildcats at 9:00 in Covina. See you there!
