Pollock Puts the Heels on the Scoreboard

After playing their first two games in the heat, the Tar Heels were excited to finally get some cooler weather in last Saturday's game against the Wildcats. But the Heels must have been enjoying the cooler weather a little too much, and slept through most of the first half. Ethan Valenzuela kicked off for the Heels as Sammy Franco and Matthew Armas combined on the stop. The Wildcats were a little slow on their attack as well, with fumbles and penalties on their first three downs. They eventually scored on third and 12, completing their extra point as well. Shane Irwin opened things up for the Heels picking up 5 yards on his carry, followed by Nicholas Ulloa and Sammy Franco with a couple of combined yards. Matthew Armas tried a QB sneak around the left end behind Raymond Ortega and Mason Munoz, but was hit hard and the Wildcats took over on downs. The Wildcats eventually punched it through again and the score was now 0-13 in favor of the Cats.

Rainn Pollock and Noah Walter set up deep to receive on the kickoff. Pollock picked up the loose ball and stormed 22 yards towards the endzone. He... could... go... all... the... way... but was caught from behind. The Heels were just inches from scoring. Pollock tried to pound it through the middle on first down, but was hit by a host of Cats. Noah Walter then crashed through the line, but once again, no touchdown yet. The Heels ended the half scoreless.

The second half proved better than the first for the Heels. Matthew Armas picked up 6 yards on first down and then delivered the ball flawlessly into the hands of John Shahine Nicholas Ulloa both with 3 yards a piece. Michael Bowers bounced through the line on a 3 yard pick up behind a huge block from Seth Contreras and Rainn Pollock finished off the attack with a 7 yarder for the first touchdown of his career! Congratulations Rainn! The Heels had one last chance to march down the field, but they couldn't get through the Wildcat defense. Congratulations on a hard fought game. Next Saturday we will play the Georgia Bulldogs in an evening game in Arcadia.
