INTERLEAGUER

VOLUME 76, NUMBER 6 • OCTOBER 3, 2016

COLUMN ONE

Kare Youth League's elementary school in Arcadia called Pearl Prep has its largest enrollment in over 10 years. Pictured here are members of the 5th grade class who recently went on a field trip to the LA County Fair. For information call 626-442-7737.

Four Important Events in History

What do the birth of Friedrich Nietzsche, a letter written by Grace Bedell to Abraham Lincoln, and the Statue of Liberty being declared a National Monument all have in common? They all took place on October 15 (and if you don't know anything about one or more of these events you might want to look them up). Ironically, something else is going to be happening on October 15, 2016...the winning tickets will be drawn in the 3-2-1 ticket sales promotion. Everyone needs to reach their quota by that day (the winner will actually be drawn at the end of activities so stubs and cash can be turned in until the offices close and games have concluded).

C & B Division - 40
A & AA Division - 50
AAA Division - 80
Pac-12 Division - 100

Royal Friends - 40
Karens - 50
Pac Five (4th) - 60
Pac Five (5-6th) - 80

Cheese or Bologna

You know that uncle...everyone has one...when the photographer is taking pictures and wants everyone to say, "Cheese" and he says, "Bologna" instead? Well, leave that guy at home beginning on Saturday, October 15, because Kare teams will be getting their pictures taken (and over the next few weeks beyond that date). Look in the schedule for the games in bold italic letters. Packages are $20 and need to be paid before the pictures are taken.

Failure is an Option by Aviva Patz (excerpt from Parent Magazine) Part Two

A review of 200 studies published in Psychological Science in the Public Interest found that having high self-esteem didn't cause kids to get better grades or do better in their career. "Success leads to feeling good about yourself, not the other way around," explains Roy Baumeister, Ph.D., a psychologist at Florida State University, in Tallahassee. Even more revealing: An experiment published in the Journal of Social Science and Clinical Psychology found that students who were faring poorly in college did even worse following efforts to boost their self-esteem.

So should you resist the urge to rebuild your child's block tower when it tumbles to the floor? There's no right answer. You need to determine how much struggling he can bear. But there are everyday steps you can take to teach him how to cope when things don't work out exactly the way he wants.

The next time he comes home crying because the other kids wouldn't let him play freeze tag, you might ask how he might change the situation next time. "Really get him brainstorming," says Vickie Falcone, author of You Can't Make Me: How to Parent With More Connecting and Less Correcting. "The more possible solutions he can come up with, the better." Avoid nixing silly ideas or you'll shut down his creative problem-solving. Instead, you might say to him, "Yes, that's one option. What else could you do?" Preschoolers may need to be prompted a little.

It is also important to keep in mind that lavishing a child with compliments can do more harm than good. Kids who are overpraised become dependent on others for validation ("It's only a good picture if Mom tacks it up on the fridge") and may end up needing a constant flow of positive feedback to feel valued. "You get confidence from overcoming adversity, not from being told how great you are all the time," according to psychologist Dan Kindlon, Ph.D., author of Tough Times, Strong Children.
