INTERLEAGUER

VOLUME 76, NUMBER 25 • MARCH 13, 2017

COLUMN ONE

The Sakamoto family in Upland lost their mother in her fight with cancer. Kare families participated in a fundraiser last Saturday to help the family. If you would like to help financially or send a card, let the Kare offices know and they will pass it on. Thanks.

What Do Thomas Skelton, the Rose Bowl, and April 1st have in Common?

April 1st is a day when a lot of tomfoolery goes on, and it is interesting to note where the term, “tomfoolery” comes from. Thomas Skelton was a court jester in Britain in the 16th century and was known as “Tom Fool”. So where does the Rose Bowl come into it, you ask? Well, April 1st will be the first day to pick up your SoccerFest 2017 tickets to sell. The SoccerFest is a huge fundraiser for Kare Youth League where members get sponsors (or sell tickets) to help support the Kare program and in return, get the opportunity to play soccer in the Rose Bowl. Watch for articles each week in the Interleaguer giving you more information on this wonderful event.

Goodness Defies the Odds: Part One

*Edited from Chicken Soup for the Soul

She opened the letter as she strolled up the driveway from the mailbox. As she finished the first paragraph she stopped in her tracks, unable to focus because of the tears in her eyes. After a few seconds, she lifted her head toward the perfect sky and, for a brief, wonderful moment, she could hear her son singing his favorite song.

In the house, she put the mail down and called her husband at the store where he worked to tell him what had just arrived. At first, he was speechless, trying awkwardly to collect his emotions and having some difficulty. “Read it to me,” the husband said. She spoke softly and slowly, savoring each word. When she finished, neither said anything for a long time until, finally, the husband declared: “There really is a God.”

Eighteen months ago, they were living at Children’s Hospital in Boston. Their nine-year-old son had been diagnosed with cancer. As if that weren’t enough, the father had just been laid off by a high-tech company that was surviving only by “downsizing,” a 1990s word for unemployment. Like many people affected by such management decisions, the layoff was an economic death sentence to the household. His wife was a library clerk. In addition to their son, there were three other children, girls ages seven, five and two.

Day after day, both parents took turns at the hospital with the sick boy. The doctors and nurses were wonderful as they managed to evoke smiles and optimism from those so wounded by the bitter reality of their illness.

Their son struck up a friendship with another boy on the floor, a 10-year-old who, like him, loved baseball. And on those dreamy summer nights when the Olde Towne Team was home, the two of them sat by a window on an upper floor in a hospital ward and listened to games on the radio as they looked at the lights of the ballpark off in the distance, washing across the July sky like some brilliant Milky Way all their own. (concludes next week...)
