B & A – March 3 ($42)

February 24th Will Be a Special Day

February 24th will be an action packed day of activities at Kare Youth League. First, all the basketball playoff games will be going on. Teams will be facing off everywhere from Ontario to Arcadia to get the opportunity to play in championship. Second, the tickets for the Kare Invitational will also be distributed. Each member will have the chance to help support their center (money raised from this event goes directly to your center; for instance, all money earned by Covina members goes to the Covina Center, etc.) by reaching a mandatory quota set for each member. Then, on Saturday, April 28th, Kare Youth League children will be competing in “Olympic” type events in one of the most iconic stadiums on the planet, the Rose Bowl in Pasadena. One of the easiest ways to meet your quota is to have a business become a team sponsor for the event. Another way to reach the quota is to sell the tickets to friends and family members. Don’t worry, if you ask them to purchase a ticket they will still be your friend or family member (or at least they should be).

Fred the Postman: Part 2

From Mark Sanborn’s “The Fred Factor”

“Here’s what I suggest, Mr. Sanborn,” Fred continued. “I’ll put mail in your box as long as I can get it to close. That way nobody will know you’re gone. Whatever doesn’t fit in the box, I’ll put between the screen door and the front door. Nobody will see it there. And if that area becomes too full of mail, I’ll just hold the rest of it for you until you come back into town.”

At this point I started to wonder: Does this guy really work for the U.S. Postal Service? Maybe this neighborhood had its own private mail-delivery system. Still, because Fred’s suggestions sounded like a terrific plan, I agreed to them.

Two weeks later I returned home from a trip. As I put the key in my front door lock, I noticed my doormat was missing. Were thieves actually stealing doormats in Denver? Then I saw the mat in a corner of the porch, concealing something. I lifted the mat and found a note from Fred. Reading his message, I learned what had happened. While I was gone, a different delivery service had mistakenly delivered a package sent to me. The box had been left on somebody else’s porch, five doors down the street. Noticing my box on the wrong porch, Fred had picked it up, carried it to my house, attached his note, and then tried to hide the package by placing it under the doormat.

Not only was Fred delivering the mail, he was now picking up the slack for UPS! His actions made a huge impression on me. As a professional speaker, I am particularly adept at finding and pointing out what’s “wrong” with customer service and business in general. Finding examples of what’s “right” or even praiseworthy is much harder. Yet here was my postman, Fred, a gold-plated example of what personalized service looks like and a role model for anyone who wants to make a difference in his or her work.

Anyone can be a Fred and that includes you! The result will not just be extraordinary effort and success in your work. You’ll find yourself living an extraordinary life as well.
