D1 Winter Camp super heroes!

Parents Take to Field/Courts in Summer

Last summer Mothers of Kare members had a great time playing softball at “after hours” at Kare Park. This year we plan to do something similar. The questions are: “Should the Moms play softball or volleyball?” and “Do Dads want to play softball or basketball?” It is time to make your opinion known. Let someone in the office know what you might be interested in and then, let’s “Play Ball!”

Where Does Patrick Mahomes Attribute Success? From Max Preps and NFHS

On football’s grandest stage, its latest star attraction not only delivered another virtuoso performance but demonstrated the best career path to success. In leading the Kansas City Chiefs to victory in Super Bowl LIV, quarterback Patrick Mahomes became the latest – and perhaps best – example of the benefits of playing multiple sports during high school.

In the week prior to the Super Bowl, Mahomes talked about his ascension to the top of the football world. Despite the opportunity to focus solely on baseball as his father had done, Mahomes rejected sport specialization. Instead, he spoke about how playing multiple sports in high school paved the way for his success. Had he chosen to specialize in one sport during his high school days, Mahomes might never had made it to the NFL since, as he noted in the week prior to the Super Bowl, he was “a baseball player that was playing football.”

Mahomes believes the skills he learned as a shortstop in baseball and as a point guard in basketball helped him more as a quarterback on the football field than if he had chosen to devote his entire energies to football.

Mahomes experienced the benefits of playing multiple sports – better leadership and teamwork skills, reduced risk of burnout in one sport, a variety of experiences from involvement with different sports and teams, reduced risk of overuse injuries in one sport and exposure to a variety of coaching styles.

Many parents believe that in order for their child to earn a college scholarship and play at the professional level, they have to specialize in one sport year-round. This pattern has led to the proliferation of non-school programs and coaches, many of which stray from the education-based focus of high school sports.

While there are a few who achieve elite status in a sport, the majority of people who participate do not. We believe the multiple-sport path demonstrated by Mahomes is the best route to attaining athletic success and lifelong enjoyment of sports.
